

David Harris Bsc ARCS FRES

David was born in 1958 and educated at King Henry VIII School, Coventry, Imperial College, London and Pembroke College, Cambridge. He taught biology in several independent schools and has been head of biology and a boarding housemaster. His involvement with the CCF commenced in 1985 with an appointment in the Royal Marines Detachment at Pangbourne College. He later served as Contingent Commander at Pangbourne and at Kimbolton School for a total of eleven years. In both schools he was involved in the development of leadership training and the organisation of adventurous training; he has been involved in expeditions to the Galapagos

Islands, North-East Greenland and a number of African countries. He is particularly interested in African mountains and springtails.
